

Creativity, Analysis and Production

As a moderately creative person, a career that enables you to exercise your creativity will be more satisfying for you. Avoid jobs that have no creative outlets or are overly structured.

You have a keen interest in problem solving and analysis. Jobs that allow you to put your mind to work on problems and enable you to exercise your analytical skills will be better for you.

You love working with your hands and making or repairing things. You should possibly choose a job that allows you to work outdoors and allows you to feel the satisfaction of getting something tangible and physical done.
